David H. Spenner
Chief of Police

2004 was a year of reflection and development for the Racine Police Department. The current fiscal circumstances affecting our nation, state, and city have also impacted the police department; however, we proudly stepped up to meet the challenge and were able to persevere.

While budget restraints forced us to reduce our work force from 206 officers to 196 officers, we still maintained the high level of service expected by the citizens of our city, while lowering our number through attrition.

Overtime was examined and systems were established to control overtime spending, allowing us to remain within our overtime budget which had been substantially reduced.

We examined the structure and operation of the police department to determine ways that we could improve the efficiency and performance of the police department and were able to identify several solutions and enhancements that can be made. The enhancements will be examined and implementations made as we progress through 2005.

I am proud of our officers and employees who worked together as a team during this challenging year and were unyielding in their commitment to control crime and solve problems in the city of Racine. Unfortunately, crime did increase slightly during 2004, but through the efforts of every person working at the police department, this increase remained small and we still enjoy a crime rate lower than we have had during the last three decades.
